News of South Richmond

Henderson and Stuart Lodges, I. O. O. F., will hold their annual memorial services at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night in Odd-Fellows' Hall, Eighth and Hull Streets. An interesting program of music and addresses has been arranged, and all members and their families are invited to be present.

Children's Day.
The Central Methodist Sunday school will hold its Children's Day services at 11 o'clock this morning. The cantata, "The Good Shepherd," will be rendered. Mr. Renner, who has charge of the musical part of the program, will be assisted by the Oak Grove Quartet.

In the Oak Grove Baptist Church Children's Day will be observed at 4 o'clock to-night. A fine program has been prepared. The pastor will preach at both services, his morning subject being "The Husbandman."

Personals and Briefs.
Miss Hazel Mable, of South Boston, who has been attending the Blackstone Female Institute commencement exercises, is visiting Miss Isabel White, of South Richmond.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

Year Book of Woman's Club of Ashland Issued by Committee.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Ashland, Va., June 17.—The year book of the Woman's Club of Ashland for the fall and winter of 1910-11 has been issued by the program committee. Miss Nannie Vaden, Mrs. Allen Maury, Mrs. R. B. Smith and Miss Herndon. The officers are Mrs. R. E. Blackwell, president; Mrs. Jas. H. Cheney, vice-president; Mrs. Hall Canter, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Schooler Fox, librarian. The papers which are to be read will treat on "Manners and Customs, Literature and Arts," of capital cities.

The cities which will be discussed embrace the following: Berlin, St. Petersburg, Stockholm, Constantinople, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Bern, London, Edo, Athens, Brussels, Vienna, Havana, Paris, Rio Janeiro, Mecca, Cairo, Mexico, Washington, Madrid, Dublin, Rome and Rome.

At the meetings which are held each week the papers are discussed, as well as current events. The club has been in existence for many years and has been both instructive and interesting to its members.

MOONSHINE RAIDS

Revenue Officers Destroy Outfits in North Carolina.

Reports were received yesterday at the office of Colonel W. H. Chapman, revenue agent, that several raids on "moonshine" distilleries were made during the past few days in North Carolina. Despite the fact that stills are smashed up every few days, the operators continue to make "corn-juice."

Deputy Collector J. B. Holland and several officers captured a distillery near Falcon, in Cumberland county. The outfit was destroyed. No arrests were made.

In a raid by Deputy Collector R. J. Lewis and his officers, after traveling a distance of 251 miles, several distilleries were captured and destroyed—one near Portis and Mann Gold Mines, and another in the Neuse River section. Several hundred gallons of beer was confiscated.

TWO APPLICANTS OUT FOR OFFICE

Interesting Contest for Collector of Customs at Petersburg.

Times-Dispatch Bureau,
109 North Sycamore Street,
Petersburg, Va., June 18.

An interesting contest for the position of collector of customs at this port is in progress. William Mahone, the incumbent of the office, is an applicant for reappointment, as is also H. Claiborne Willson, at present deputy collector in charge of the internal revenue office in this city. Both applicants are backed by influential friends, who are making themselves heard in Washington.

The office is a good paying one and much to be desired. In former years the collector of customs at Petersburg was merely custodian of the Federal building and received little or no salary.

Church Congregation Organizes.
At a meeting of the congregation of the newly organized Grove Avenue Baptist Church last night a constitution was adopted and officers were elected as follows: Deacons—T. C. Crowder, F. M. Willis and Joseph U. Jones; Church Clerk, Robert L. Traylor; Church Treasurer, Stanton Pilcher; Finance Committee—Fred Pilcher, chairman; C. H. Kruse, W. J. Eulady, Morris Walker and Guy G. Lewis. This church was organized on June 10 and is in splendid shape.

Dinwiddie County Taxes.
The Board of Supervisors of Dinwiddie met at the county courthouse yesterday and fixed the tax levy for the ensuing year as follows: Tax on real and personal property, 20 cents on the $100 of value; county school tax, 20 cents; road tax, 20 cents; district school tax, 25 cents. A levy of 12 cents was made on property in Rowan District for the sinking fund and interest for the road bonds appropriated to that district. The roads bonds to the amount of $100,000, some time ago voted by the people of the county, were divided ratably as to length of roads between the several districts.

Mrs. Tibbs's Case Continued.
The case of Mrs. Annie Tibbs, of Richmond, arrested here yesterday afternoon, charged with conveying hack saws into the city jail to aid her nephew, Junius A. Williamson, in making his escape, was this morning set for Monday for trial. Mrs. Tibbs in the meantime will remain in jail.

The action of the Court of Appeals on the application for a writ to prohibit the Hastings Court from trying a Williamson for forgery, because, as a convict, sentenced to the penitentiary, he is in the custody of the State, and not within the jurisdiction of the court, is awaited with interest. If the writ of prohibition is awarded, Williamson will not be tried for forgery or wife murder until after his discharge from the penitentiary four years hence.

Personal and Otherwise.
Rev. F. G. Scott, D. D., left to-day for Orange county to spend his summer vacation.

Most of the white public school teachers of this city have gone to Charlottesville to attend the summer normal at the university.

The question of the building of a steel bridge across the Appomattox to connect Matocsa and that section of Chesterfield county with Dinwiddie county at Ferndale Park has not yet been settled. A meeting of representatives of the two counties was to have been held yesterday to consider details, but some misunderstanding was not held.

The remains of William Plummer, who died at his home in Norfolk on Friday, were brought to this city to-day and the funeral will be to-morrow. R. T. Clarke, who is the inventor of a cultivator which he explains, will do as much work as two ordinary cultivators.

The Old Dominion Steamship Company has been notified by Captain J. H. Gallagher, the agent here, to reserve accommodations for fifty veterans of A. P. Hill Camp, who will leave by that line on Friday, July 2, for New York, on their trip to Springfield, Mass. Captain Gallagher will accompany the veterans as far as New York, and he has been notified that every care will be taken of them by the company.

FAREWELL PARTY ENDS IN WEDDING

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Lynchburg, Va., June 18.—A special to-night from Baltimore says:

Miss Louise Smith, eldest daughter of Bishop A. C. Smith, who was for four years pastor of Court Street Methodist Church at Lynchburg, sailed for Bremen, Germany, this morning for a summer vacation. Miss Smith took the steamer at Baltimore, and an interesting event attended the occasion, which was not on the original program. Osgood Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Erlich Smith and Miss Alice Glenn Smith, brothers and sisters, came to Virginia to bid farewell to Miss Louise Smith before she sailed. There also came from Norfolk at the same time, Dr. Charles W. Doughtie, a young physician of that city, whose engagement to Miss Alice Glenn Smith was announced some days ago. The wedding was to have taken place in the late summer or early fall, but the young folks decided to have the ceremony take place before Miss Louise Smith should sail.

Accordingly Congressman Carter Glass, of Virginia, a devoted friend of Miss Smith's parents, was summoned from Washington to give the bride away, the latter's mother, who approved the arrangement, not being able to get to Baltimore from Norfolk.

The nuptials were celebrated in the chapel of the First Methodist church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John E. Vanmetre, dean of the Woman's College, and an old friend of the late Bishop Smith and family. The bride was attired in traveling costume. At the conclusion of the marriage, the party had lunch at the Roper, and later Dr. Doughtie and the bride left for Atlantic City, to spend some days before returning to Norfolk, where they will reside with Mrs. Coke Smith.

AFTER "COLONEL" COMES DELUGE

New York, June 18.—On the heels of the reception to Theodore Roosevelt to-day came the deluge. Two hours after the parade the experts had up Fifth Avenue had drenched the whole metropolitan district was swept by the most violent storm in months. In twenty minutes .60 of an inch of rain fell, while the wind at times attained a velocity of fifty-eight miles an hour.

Three deaths were reported early to-night, four other persons are believed to have been drowned in the capsizing of a fishing smack off Long Island, while scores of others had narrow escapes in accidents on the water from lightning, and in being struck by trees, cornices and heavy signs hurled to the ground by the wind. Baseball games were abandoned, and for a time panic threatened under the tents of the showing in the upper part of the city.

The storm broke almost without warning, preceded by a gust of wind that uprooted trees, sent street signs flying and tore into tatters the elaborate decorations hung out in honor of Mr. Roosevelt. Then came the down-

"I Would Not Take $1,000.00 For What Milam Has Done For My Eyes," says Miss Pattie Faulkner, of the Danville Orphanage. This lady has suffered with her eyes from childhood, and of late years her vision has been greatly impaired. She says her improvement has been so great that she believes she will soon be able to read without her glasses.

This is just one of many such cases. A prominent ex-bank official, now the executive of a large corporation, who was steadily going blind, after having been given up by specialists, has had his eyesight almost completely restored. A veteran of the civil war, who lives in North Danville, who has been taking Milam for Eczema, says that while he has not been able to see as far as across the street for many, many years, he noticed the other day from his house in North Danville a church steeple in the sunshine on the other side of the river. He says the recovery of his vision is something marvelous. An old colored woman in Richmond, who, when she started taking Milam could not tell night from day, and whose case was pronounced hopeless by the specialists, the other day counted the people in a hack passing by on the street.

The veins conveying the blood to the optic nerve are very tiny, and sometimes the blood does not circulate in them sufficiently to nourish the nerve, causing it to waste away and gradually die. THIS FORM of eye trouble MILAM cures. Write for booklet.

pour, almost a cloudburst in violence. In a moment streets were flooded and the crowds still lingering down town were soaked and bedraggled. For an hour and a half the storm continued, causing great damage.

Passengers on excursion boats were among the worst sufferers. Several boats were hung up in Hell Gate by the storm, not daring to face such treacherous currents. From all along the water front came reports of scores of rowboats and sailing craft being capsized, with probable loss of life. Small craft in the harbor and far out on the Long Island coast also suffered.

In Brooklyn, Frank Ross, fifty-two years old, was instantly killed by an uprooted tree. Another tree in Flushing, L. I., was struck by lightning, and Julius Joska, sixteen years of age, who had sought refuge under its branches with his two small sisters, was killed. Lightning was also responsible for the death of Pietro Santamurto, forty years old, an engineer of a Long Island brewery. The bolt toppled over the huge smokestack and the engineer was buried under tons of debris. Fire that followed caused a loss of $20,000.

ROBERT CHANLER MARRIES SINGER

Grandson of Late John Jacob Astor Has Won Mlle. Cavalleri.

BY CHARLES MELTZER.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.]
Paris, June 18.—The marriage of Lina Cavalleri, one of the most beautiful women in Europe and "Bob" Chanler, which took place here to-day, was a surprise to all but the few initiated in whom the bride and bridegroom-elect had confided. Up to yesterday the exact date on which the event was to take place was still uncertain.

The ceremony was hastened owing to an uneasy feeling in the minds of the two interested parties, that agencies the reverse of benevolent were busy trying to prevent the match. It was nearly noon to-day when several carriages drove up to the door of the office of the Mayor of the Sixth Arrondissement. From one of the three alighted a lovely woman. It was Cavalleri. In attendance was a tall, good-looking, much broader shouldered and smooth of face, who seemed radiantly happy. That was Chanler.

With the principals came the witnesses of the bride: an Italian painter, Pizzella Oreste Cavalleri, the bride's brother, and Signor De Segro, the well known baritone of the Metropolitan Opera House. Then came the bridegroom's two witnesses, Messrs. Robbin and Leob, and the Marquis D'Albino, an old Roman friend of the bride, who was the only other person present.

The ceremony was of a dull dreary character. The usual questions were asked and answered, the accustomed signatures recorded, and the party drove off to the well-known restaurant, the Pavillon de la Monnaie, in the Bois de Boulogne, where luncheon was served quietly beneath the trees. After luncheon the young couple went for a drive, and then proceeded to the bride's mansion in the Avenue Messine, where the servants were instructed to tell all callers except a privileged few that Mr. and Madame Chanler had gone to the country.

As a matter of fact, just before dinner I found them both at the Avenue Messine house, with the bride's mother, an unpretending, elderly Italian woman, dodging reporters, who were calling every five minutes. La Belle Lina was curled up on her balcony behind a bank of flowers, watching her disconcerted visitors as they came and went below. She looked particularly winning in a light décolleté dress and a pink gauze wrap. Around her throat was a necklace of pearls. In her dark tresses was a pale blue bow.

"I am an American now," said she, laughingly, "and glad of it. If I felt just a little stronger than I do I should have little left to wish for. One can't be quite content when one has chronic appendicitis. My doctor says it is not dangerous, but I may have to undergo an operation yet."

"I shall not give up the stage. Next autumn I hope to begin work again, but for the present we shall remain in Paris, making trips now and then to our country house near Poitiers."

Then she added, looking amiably at her husband, "We may take a trip to Japan with a few friends. Yes, the marriage was decided upon in a hurry. We have been waiting for my family papers and birth certificate, and we could not marry until our banns had been proclaimed in Rome."

"Bob" Chanler beamed as he listened to his partner's pretty prattle.

Owing to the suddenness which marked the wedding, no presents were sent to the bride, except a large quantity of costly flowers. During the drive after the wedding Mme. Chanler called for a moment on Gatti Cassazza, the manager of the Metropolitan, and gave him the news. She looked wonderfully bright and gay, despite the chronic appendicitis to which she referred in our interview, which has been troubling her for some time past, and which prevented her accepting a proffered engagement to sing in Buenos Ayres and the Chatelet.

Observe Children's Day.
To-day will be observed as Children's Day in the Leigh Street Sunday school. The school will assemble at 9:45 A. M., and after the lesson hour will adjourn in a body to the church auditorium, where services will be conducted and a sermon delivered by the pastor. The evening hour will also be devoted to a service for the little folks, and a special program has been arranged by the committee in charge. Members of adult and home departments are invited to attend.
